Route and parking

VUmc

| By train

Good public transport connections exist between the VU University Medical Center and the various train stations in and around Amsterdam. Please refer to the 'By tram' and 'By bus' sections for further information. The closest railway station is Amsterdam Zuid station. From there, you can walk to the hospital in about twenty minutes or continue your journey by public transport. For current travel information, go to www.ns.nl and www.gvb.nl.

From Noord-Holland: quick transfer at Sloterdijk. In the Zaanstreek area, trains depart for Amsterdam every fifteen minutes. When travelling from anywhere in the province of Noord-Holland (Alkmaar, Hoorn, the Zaanstreek area, Haarlem), an excellent transfer to express tram/metro line 50 is available at Amsterdam Sloterdijk train station. The stop on this line closest to the hospital is Amstelveenseweg.

From Leiden/The Hague: six trains an hour. A direct slow train service to Amsterdam Zuid is available twice an hour (trains with destination Lelystad). Four more services an hour require a transfer at Schiphol Airport station. Get off at Amsterdam Zuid train station. So when travelling from The Hague, a total of six trains an hour will bring you to Amsterdam Zuid in about fifty minutes.

From Amersfoort and the north-eastern part of the Netherlands: four trains an hour (Leeuwarden, Groningen, Enschede, Zwolle). Excellent intercity train services connect Amersfoort and the north-east of the country to Amsterdam: for example, from Amersfoort, the train takes less than thirty minutes to reach Amsterdam Zuid/WTC. The other trains take fifteen minutes longer. Both direct services and services requiring a transfer are operated.

From the Gooi area and Flevoland: four trains an hour. Good train connections exist between the Gooi area and Flevoland and Amsterdam Zuid. At most train stations in the area, a direct service to Amsterdam Zuid is available twice an hour, with another half-hourly service requiring a transfer in Weesp. It takes about thirty minutes to get to Amsterdam Zuid from Almere.

Supplementary Public Transport (AOV) Terminal

The AOV Terminal is an electronic booking system patients can use to arrange for their transport back to their homes in Amsterdam and the surrounding area.

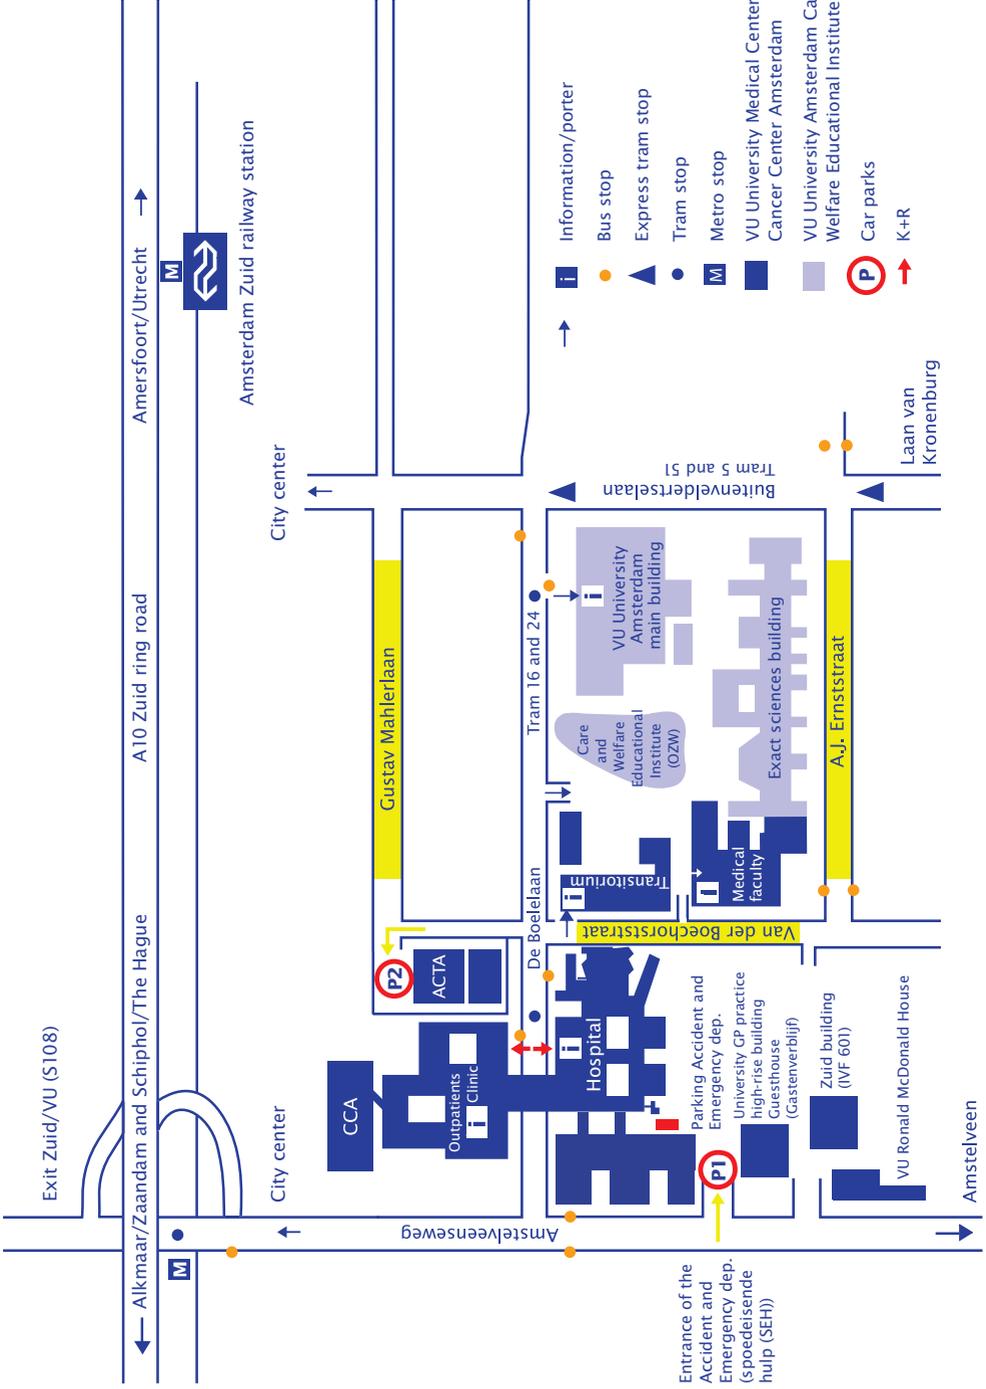

Two AOV Terminals are available within the VU University Medical Center: one at the Outpatients Clinic entrance and one at the main entrance of the hospital. Ordering a taxi just requires swiping a transport pass with a magnetic stripe through the card reader of the pillar-shaped booking device. Your taxi will arrive within 15 to 45 minutes. The transport pass contains your patient data, allowing the taxi base to consider whether to send a regular taxi, a taxi van or a wheelchair-accessible van. In addition, these data include the patient's residence, so the taxi driver knows where to drive to. If you have any questions about Supplementary Public Transport (AOV), please call the Wmo Helpdesk telephone line, 0800 0643 (free of charge), available Mon-Fri between 9.00 a.m. and 5.00 p.m.
